Other comments about this event?

- No
- Engaging, interesting panelists and moderator. Useful information. Inspiration to work at this topic.
- Near Lester was right on when he said this was a great conversation to open communication, but we the audience yearned for more.
- I thought the diversity of the presenters made the event more powerful.
- I enjoyed this conversation and the engagement prompts. It would have been nice to have some more discussion about how to start student groups or share some suggestions on where and how to get more resource material on this topic. Having a question portion would also have been good.
- "Very informative since I am not a parent. I appreciated the various viewpoints presented by each panelist. I have good friends that have an almost two year old son who is so bright and perceptive, and perhaps it is time they begin to discuss race with him if they haven't already. I will tell them about this discussion tonight."
- I know that it is extremely difficult to address specific questions or concerns raised by the audience in the Zoom format, especially with the time constraints. I wish there had been more opportunity to do so, especially with regard to those who were asking for suggestions and strategies.

Other event topics you'd like to learn about?

- How to resolve the conflict with identity and being born in America as an Asian American
- "Perhaps some type of discussion on the intersection of the arts as it relates to humanizing us as regarding a certain time period in history. For instance, the panel could consist of a musician, an artist like a painter or photographer, an actor, a poet, a novelist who each speak to a specified theme or topic as the Black Renaissance or just race relations in general or climate change, etc. This is very general I realize. You already have many diverse and amazing programs which I have enjoyed and learned so much from. Thank you for all that you all do!

- More topics like this would be great.
