Dispelling the Myths: Transgender Athletes and Sport

Our first event of Fall 2021 addresses myths, misconceptions, and untruths about trans and intersex women athletes in women's sport. Does fairness in competition mean including all women and ceasing to police women's bodies and femininity? According to the International Olympic Committee, “participation in sport is a human right.” This presentation explores connections between testosterone and sport performance, and addresses the current anti-transgender political and social climate. Virtual keynote address by Veronica Ivy, PhD, and discussion and Q&A facilitated by Scott Brooks, PhD.

Dispelling Myths of "Critical Race Theory" in K-12 Schools

Exactly what is "Critical Race Theory" (CRT), and why are conversations about race, equity, and racial justice in K-12 classrooms so contentious now? Three experienced and acclaimed 2019 Teachers of the Year—AZ, UT, and AR—share their experiences and perspectives on the social and political debate taking the US by storm. In the wake of the US and global racial justice "reckoning," where does this focus on Critical Race Theory fall, and how does this "controversy" challenge the foundation of US education and race relations? Please join us for this informative and thoughtful program over Zoom and Facebook Live.

Fall 2021 Calendar
We are excited to announce a new Project Humanities Undergraduate Research Ambassadors Program. This is an opportunity specifically designed to allow ASU undergraduates to explore a social justice issue, work with an ASU faculty mentor, and then publicly present their findings at a Project Humanities public event. Selected student participants will receive a $2,500 stipend to support their Ambassadorship work during the Spring 2022 semester. The deadline to submit an application and proposal is 20 September 2021, and awardees will be announced at our virtual 10th-Anniversary celebration taking place on Saturday, 13 November 2021.

To learn more about this new program, click the link below. Please contact the Project Humanities with any questions.

Our Humanity 101 High School Contest is in full swing. Please share this opportunity far and wide.

Humanity 101 High School Contest

Help us reach our goal of 101 Founders!

Are you excited about all that Project Humanities brings to the world? Support our work by becoming a Founder. Founders are individuals, groups, and organizations who invest at least $1,000 (tax-deductible) in our Project Humanities programming. In addition to connecting more intimately with the impactful work of Arizona State University and Project Humanities...

- Founders are lifetime members of our organization supporters.
- Founders have via Project Humanities a local and national platform from which to explore topics and critical issues about which they are most passionate.
- Founders are VIP guests who meet and interact with Project Humanities keynote speakers.
- Founders are listed as such on our Project Humanities website and on a physical banner displayed at Project Humanities major public events and activities.
- Founders can serve as mentors, volunteers, potential speakers, workshop facilitators, competition judges, and panelists for Project Humanities events.
- ...And more.

Such an investment can also take the form of a pledge of installments.

And what’s just around the corner?
Of course, it’s our annual Hacks for Humanity: Hacking for the Social Good!

This October 8th-10th marks the Project Humanities 8th Annual Hacks for Humanity. This signature event brings together techies and non-techies, high school students through retirees, amateur coders and pros from all over the world. We look forward to another successful virtual iteration of this fun, inspiring, and creative weekend; made possible by State Farm and ASU J. Orin Edison Entrepreneurship + Innovation Institute.
