Beyond Books: "The Stuff" of Racial Representation (Interactive Exhibition)

Wed, Oct 20, 2021 2:00 PM (MST-AZ)
ASU Tempe Campus

Racist Americana — objects ranging from dolls to greeting cards to home decor — document the lived experiences of Black Americans and societal perspectives on race, gender, sexuality, class, ability, religion, and body size. Over the past 30 years, Dr. Neal Lester, ASU Foundation Professor of English and Founding Director of Project Humanities, has curated a personal collection of over 1000 diverse items. Through the lens of Dr. Lester’s “colored museum,” participants will reflect on how people experience “difference” and social justice through things and “stuff.” Participants are invited to contribute to this interactive experience by bringing and sharing artifacts, stories, images, photographs, or other material culture that connect them with social justice beyond books.

Vital Voices: What Children's Stories Taught Me about Humanity

Wed, Oct 27, 2021 6:00 PM (MST-AZ)

Virtual

Representation and narratives matter in children’s stories. At the same age that children learn to read (between ages 4-6), studies show they also begin to form their own conceptions of right from wrong and even begin to associate difference with stereotypes and social status. How can adults cherish traditions and memories of children’s stories and while still holding themselves accountable to instill values of social justice and humanity in children? Join this conversation about compassion, empathy, integrity, respect, and self-reflection in children’s stories.

As a Vital Voices event, this format invites attendees to present a 2-3 minute share: poem, passage, speech, photograph, song or story.

Save the date for Project Humanities 10th Year Anniversary Celebration!

This virtual experience will include music, awards and more. Details to be announced soon.

We are only 2 Founders away from reaching our goal of 101 Founders!
Are you excited about all that Project Humanities brings to the world? Support our work by becoming a Founder. Founders are individuals, groups, and organizations who invest at least $1,000 (tax-deductible) in our Project Humanities programming.

Such an investment can also take the form of a pledge of installments.
